

CBS SOAPS IN DEPTH cover story

Brooke was surprised to find that she could still hear Taylor gloating from up there on her high horse.

Dayzee urges Thomas to come clean, and if he does, Taylor's ideal personified, despite having given Ridge and Taylor the green light. And in the "awkwardly uncomfortable" camp are Thomas, Stephanie and now Dayzee, who's managed to coax the truth out of her beau. The young man continues to feel tormented that his parents' reunion is predicated on the whopper of a lie he told about getting carnal with Brooke. It was only his assertion, after all, that prompted Ridge to walk out on Brooke. "This time, it was just too much," confirms Moss. "He's just had his share of disappointments with Brooke, and he thinks he and Brooke are done for good."

Naturally, the morally-upstanding vision of a "happily ever after" with Ridge could come crashing down as hard as she did after nibbling on those souvenir berries! Though Stephanie also cops to feelings of guilt over the deceit she and Thomas used to manipulate the situation, she's steadfast in her belief that they're doing the right thing. She tells her grandson to toe the line, for Taylor's sake!

Should the truth rear its ugly head, could a pair of blinders be among this bride's trousseau? You betcha, says Tylo. "She has been known to bury her head in the sand," observes the actress, "Especially when it comes to things she doesn't want to see!"

If practice makes perfect, Taylor and Ridge should have a flawless wedding. What's that? Practice doesn't make perfect? Uh-oh...